

Hey, guys!

It's a new semester, which means (re)introducing ourselves to campus. While we'll be promoting The Writing Center as a whole on the new blog, you each deserve your own spotlight to share a little bit about yourselves. The quickest way to do that is to put brief blurbs about each of us on our "Meet the Team" page.

Each section will be laid out something like this:

Rachel A. Senior

Lead Consultant, Social Media "person"

Major: General Studies

Minors: Creative Writing, Public Relations

Hey, Dons! December 2016 grad right here! A little bit about me: I'm a Virgo and lover of elephants. Brainstorming paper topics and helping organize ideas are my favorite kinds of consultations. I've always wanted to peer-review and learn from a paper about neurology.

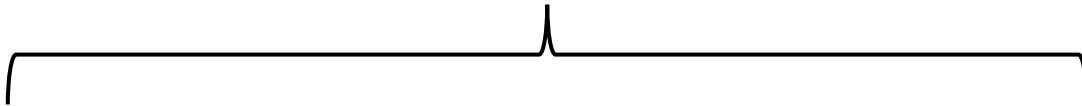

Last year, the idea of blurb writing made consultants a little nervous. This year, I've put together some prompts for you to use if you need to. Select up to six items from the "prompt bank" (below/on the back of this sheet) to include in your blurb if coming up with ice breakers isn't your thing.

INSTRUCTIONS:

- It should be 40-45 words
- Don't begin all of your sentences with "I"
- Be creative about your item selection

Pick 1 of these and 2 – 5 of these

Hello!	your horoscope sign	an animal you want to see in the wild	your dream job	a writing-related mistake you still make
Welcome to the Writing Center!	extrovert, introvert, or ambivert	a movie you wish you could've been in	your "plan B" career choice	a stage of writing you like to work with
Hi!	your MBTI result	a book or series you wish you'd written	the coolest thing you did this summer	a paper topic you want to read about
Greetings!	only child, oldest, middle, or youngest	an activity you would do for 24 hours	something you're looking forward to this semester	a past paper you learned a lot from
Hey, Dons!	are you left-brained or right-brained	an item you can't be without	a professor or class you loved	your idea here

^ These do not have to be in any particular order ^
